INTRODUCTION

The secret of the Farberware® “Open Hearth” Broiler/Rotisserie is as old as cooking itself—AIR. Air circulating freely around the cooking meat allows the meat to breathe and seals in the natural juices while the unwanted fat drains off, assuring flavorful and nutritious meats. The broiler/rotisserie will broil steaks or chops, grill fish or fruit, rotisserie a turkey or beef roast, leg of lamb or loin of pork and gives to each a flavor everyone likes.

The Farberware “Open Hearth” Broiler/Rotisserie means smokeless and spatterless cooking. Unlike conventional electric broilers, Farberware’s heating element is below the grill, eliminating smoke and excessive heat. In addition a specially designed aluminum drip tray disperses the heat evenly, eliminating most spatter. Everything from the classic hot dog to a hearty roast tastes better! The slow cooking over an electric element produces an even browning on the outside and the desired degree of doneness on the inside. Consult the following charts for the broiler/rotisserie as guides for doneness.

In broiling, the thickness and the temperature of the meat will help to determine the cooking time. The longer each side is exposed to the heating element, the browner it will be. Cook all cuts of meat from refrigerator temperature. Remember the amount of fat on the meat, the dryness of the meat surface and the addition of seasoning salt, soy sauce, steak sauce or marinating will help to produce a dark appearance.

PLACE BROILER/ROTISSERIE ON COUNTER SO THAT IT IS NOT UNDERNEATH CABINETS OR OTHER STRUCTURE. DO NOT USE ALUMINUM FOIL OR ANY OTHER MATERIAL THAT WILL INTERFERE WITH THE FLOW OF AIR IN THE DRIP TRAY OR ON THE STAINLESS STEEL BODY.

Cooking with the Farberware “Open Hearth” Broiler/Rotisserie is an experience you’ll enjoy time and time again. Sit back and let it do the work and the results will be tender, flavorful meats—masterpieces of cooking.

how to assemble the farberware "open hearth" broiler no.450

1. Wash and dry all parts, except the heating element and cord, of the broiler before using the first time.
2. Insert the aluminum drip tray until it fits into place on the bottom of the frame.
3. Place the stainless steel body into position making sure the broiler plug receptacle is lowered under the metal bar on the right side of the frame.
4. Then insert crossbar into slots found in the center of the stainless steel body. This holds the heating element in place.
5. Place the heating element so the two prongs fit through the broiler plug receptacle and the ends of the bracket of the element fit into slots found on the stainless steel body.
6. Place the two-position rack on the ledge of the stainless steel body. See following chart or recipes for correct position—HIGH or LOW.
7. Attach plug to broiler plug receptacle. Then plug cord into 120 volt AC outlet. Always plug cord into broiler first, then into outlet. At this time, no other appliance should be plugged into this circuit.
8. Preheat until element is red.
9. Place meat or food on rack.

how to assemble the farberware "open hearth" rotisserie no.455

1. Follow above instructions for broiler through Step No. 5. (When using the rotisserie, omit the rack.)
2. Insert the small spit arm support on the right side of the frame as you look at it. The larger spit arm support holds the motor and this should be placed on the left side so it will hang without interference from the broiler plug receptacle. Supports should be inserted so that the numbers on each face forward.
3. To assemble spit, screw the handle into the spit in a counter-clockwise (left) direction. After it is tightened, the corners may not line up evenly but this will not affect the operation.
4. Slide one pronged holding fork onto spit with prongs facing the center. Insert meat on spit and then slide on second holding fork. Balance meat and tighten screws on forks to hold meat in place.
5. Place spit on spit supports. Turn meat by hand and adjust spit support arms so meat is as close to heating element as possible without touching it. Remove spit with meat and set aside.
6. Slide motor onto large spit arm support.
7. Connect large plug to broiler plug receptacle and plug other end into standard outlet or into outlet found on motor. Plug motor cord into 120 volt AC outlet. Always plug cord into broiler/rotisserie first, then into outlet.
8. Preheat broiler/rotisserie until heating element is red.
9. Insert spit into motor and rest spit on spit arm supports. Turn rotisserie switch found on motor to ON.

how to use a meat thermometer

A meat thermometer is the most accurate test to determine the degree of doneness of meat, especially roasts, but even then it is only a guide. Insert the thermometer in the roast after it has been balanced on the spit. Push the metal tip into the thickest part of the meat. It should be parallel to the spit at the handle end. Be sure the thermometer does not touch the bone and that it does not rest in a fat pocket. Before turning on the motor check the clearance; the thermometer must not touch the heating element. A thermometer is not practical for small cuts of meat, chops, Cornish hens, etc.

In turkeys, capons and chickens the thickest part of the meat is between the breast and the thigh. This is where the thermometer should be inserted, avoiding bone, fat and metal. It is sometimes difficult to be assured of an accurate thermometer reading when rotisserie poultry. As a second test of doneness, large birds are done when the thickest part of the drumstick feels very soft when pressed with fingers (be careful, the skin will be hot).

Many meats will continue to cook after removal from the broiler/rotisserie especially beef which will increase about 10 degrees in internal temperature. After removing meat, a standing time of 15 to 20 minutes is recommended to allow for this additional cooking and to make carving easier.

Remove meat from rack or spit before removing plug from outlet. When cool, separate parts of the appliance. Set aside cords and motor. The heating element is self-cleaning; DO NOT WASH. Other parts can be immersed in warm sudsy water or washed in a dishwasher. DO NOT CLEAN PARTS OF BROILER/ROTISSERIE WITH METAL SCOURING PAD. Soaking in warm sudsy water will make cleaning easier. If necessary, use a plastic mesh pad and/or stainless steel cleaner. Dry. Reassemble and the appliance is ready to be used again.

ALL REPLACEMENT PARTS FOR THE BROILER/ROTISSERIE SHOULD BE AUTHORIZED FARBERWARE PARTS.

Cooking times given in the following charts and recipes can only be guides. Several factors will affect the time—how close the meat is to the heating element, the diameter of the meat, the temperature of the meat to be cooked and the amount of house power.

broiling chart

Broiling is a method of cooking by direct heat on a rack and is usually reserved for the more tender cuts of meat. Broiling time stated in the chart and recipes is for meat at refrigerator temperature. Meats are placed on the two-position rack after the broiler is preheated. Always remove the meat from the rack before broiler is unpluged.

Spit roasted meats are extra flavorful because they are self-basted with their own juices. Meat to be cooked on the rotisserie must be no longer than 12 inches so that the entire piece of meat may be placed over the heating element. Meat should be balanced on the spit since off-center pieces will cause a jerking that may affect the motor. A properly balanced piece of meat can usually be judged by the eye; however, to test for balance rotate spit in palm of hands. Meat being cooked should be placed as close as possible to the heating element without touching it. Fasten the meat securely so that it turns only with the spit. Poultry should be tied or fastened at wings and legs to make a compact bird so that no part touches the heating element when rotating. Suggested roasting time in the chart and recipes is for meat at refrigerator temperature.

Brush roast with about ¼ cup of sauce during last 30 minutes of roasting time. Let roast stand 15 minutes before carving into thin slices. Pour juices from meat into remaining sauce; heat to serving temperature and serve with meat. Makes 8 to 10 servings.
